

DOGS UNDER SENTENCE.

ANOTHER EXECUTION TO TAKE PLACE AT THE FOUND THIS MORNING.

The feature of yesterday at the Dog Pound was the number of visitors who came to see the dogs in limbo. Among them were several fashionably dressed ladies, and they sentimentalized much over this fashion.—How human is the expression of that dog's eyes! How like the look of one under sentence of death! How much there is in the tear that trickles from that pup's nose to indicate his feelings at the prospect of being summarily dispatched—of leaving the gay and festive scenes of life for the dark and dismal grave beneath the waves of the East River!"

"I should like," said a lady, who was writing for some of the romantic weekly papers, "to see the dogs just as they are about to be drowned. I should like to see the expression of their countenances—to catch a glass of that inexpressible anguish and suspense that, settling in the heart, mounts finally to the eye, and there obscures the picture of absolute death."

There were 200 dogs brought to the Pound yesterday.

"What do you think of Birmingham as a dog catcher?" was asked of John Macmillan, the Pound keeper.

"Oh, he isn't a patch on Butler," replied John; "I paid Butler last year for 105 dogs in one day."

"He's on the year's run."

"The dogs we have in the ice cream business, but he was a great fellow when he was in the dog catcher's business."

"I should like to see him catch a star!"

"Well, he struck a good lay up in Yorkville where the shanties were on the rocks, and every shanty was good for three or four dogs. He jests over himself that he is a star. But he didn't care a continental, either the dog was a thoroughbred or a 'kyi,'"

"He'd go for 'em all the same, and he'd just let that old ring-darned spattered horse of mine make its paces down the street, and the owner of the dog would think it was as though you'd taken the whole Fire Department with it."

A multitude of boys collected in the vicinity of the Pound, and of these hundreds of rascals, "kyi's" by name, were waiting for a purchaser in one of the officially appointed catchers, who seldom gave more than fifteen cents a cur. That amount the boys were usually willing to receive, and some of them were even given ten cents for the specimens they had in store.

This morning the execution of the dogs takes place on a large scale.

LEFT TO SINK.

A young man, apparently about twenty-five years old, dressed in a fine black suit and wearing a small gauntlet, is said to have committed suicide last evening by jumping from the ferryboat Superior, plying between Roosevelt street, this city, and Williamsburg. A passenger on the boat gave the alarm, and tells the following story of the occurrence:—The supposed suicide came on board at Williamsburg just before the boat started on her seven o'clock trip and took a seat near the rear door of the gondolier's cabin. When the boat got about fifty yards out of the ship he rose and walked to the rear of the boat. He turned to one of passengers and exclaimed, "Goodby," then sprang overboard before any one could interfere to prevent him. The engineer of the boat was informed, but he, supposing the boys were trying a joke on him, remained on the boat, and, after a short time, went with D. Sawyer, Chummins, Jacksonville 9 days, with pins to Wm. Douglass; vessel to H. W. Wenberg & Co.

Sch. Mary A. Coulombe, Fenimore, Matanuska 13 days, with pins to Wm. Douglass; vessel to H. W. Wenberg & Co.
